

Departing Rosewood

produced by

Susan Hannah Hadary

John R. Anglim

MedSchool Maryland Productions

Airs March 23, 2011 8:00pm on MPT

the documentary

Departing Rosewood, the new documentary by OSCAR® winning producer, Susan Hadary, in collaboration with producer, John Anglim, expands two decades of productions documenting the worlds of individuals with physical disabilities to now include the world of individuals with developmental disabilities.

This documentary presents Steven Corderman, from abuse to institution, from institution to community. As with KING GIMP, her OSCAR® winning documentary, and others in her "Stars of Inclusion" series, she believes this program will help change society's stereotypes and help educators, health professionals and service providers to better respect, provide care and support each individual.

“Much remains to be done for individuals with developmental disabilities...”

While the people who left The Rosewood Center were provided for under a special community support program, Hadary says, “Much remains to be done for individuals with developmental disabilities in Maryland, where there’s currently a waiting list of thousands in desperate need of services. The closure of institutions is only a first step.”